GRIPPIN' AND RIPPIN'

The Eurogrip Protorq Extremes turned out to be just the right choice for our mad supermoto build

What is it?
The Protorq Extremes are Eurogrip's zero-degree steel belt radial tyres, meant for sport touring.

Are they any good?
For the KTM 390 SMC R project, we needed tyres that could match the lunacy of the bike (and of the men who wanted to turn the Enduro R into a supermoto). Having experienced the potential of the Protorq Extremes on other bikes, this was the go-to choice for this project, and boy was it the right call.

With the performance of KTM's 399cc mill, the lightweight chassis and the new bionic wheels sourced from the third-gen 390 Duke, there was no getting around the fact that the tyres were not going to have an easy life. The good thing was that these tyres were more than happy to do what was expected from them. In fact, even before these were properly run-in, they were put through an unplanned trail ride. Of course, that's not their playground — the tarmac is. And on the blacktop, the Eurogrips were an absolute riot. Cornering at triple-digit speeds? Easy. Going hard on the brakes? Controlled, but you can add some drama whenever you want to. In fact, the only limit on winding roads turned out to be the footpegs — the tyres seemed pretty comfortable being pushed to their limit. The round profile makes direction changes almost a telepathic experience.

Are they perfect? Although they come pretty close, especially in our riding conditions, the Protorqs don't feel as planted in the wet or on gravel. But that's okay, since they set the benchmark so high in the dry that one wouldn't mind being a bit cautious on wet or broken roads.

How much?
For ₹ 5069 for the 110/70 - R17 front tyre and ₹ 5991 for the 150/60 - R17 rear tyre, a set of Protorq Extreme is not expensive, especially when you factor in the grip and the agility they bring to the table. Could they have done with better control over gravel? Maybe. Are they outright dangerous in the wet? Not at all. If you can work with just being slightly extra careful when not on the track or even on good roads, you are bound to have a riot with these tyres.

Where?

FALCON ROADHOUND-ING THE RACE TRACK

We debut the new livery of our Suzuki Hayabusa on the Buddh International Circuit and also put the Eurogrip Roadhound tyres through their paces.

WHENEVER one mentions the name Hayabusa, a million images pop up in one's head. In the case of Indians, it is all from a specific movie. But even worldwide, the name carries a lot of weight. After all, the name emerged at a time when motorcycle manufacturers were locked in a top-speed war. One significant name at the time was Blackbird. And then came the Hayabusa. You know the story, right? Hayabusa means Falcon, and they hunt Blackbirds. Quite an interesting lore, but repeated too many times, so I'd avoid beating that particular dead horse.

The short of it is, the Hayabusa became the top speed king, and it remained there for a long time. Even after the Gentleman's Agreement, most people agreed that it was the fastest. It remained at that particular summit till the H2 came knocking on its doors. But when something is at the top of the pile for so long, it becomes a legend. The Hayabusa is one. The inline-4 engine, the bulbous silhouette, the two massive exhausts on either side, you know, the works.

I have been a fan for a long time. I have owned a Blackbird. Never got the opportunity to own the first-gen Buza, but had the second-gen for a while. Did a few pan-India roadtrips on it. A trip around New Zealand on its naked counterpart, the B-King. Then I sold it off. But my love for the Buza remained. Then the third-gen came out, and I got one. I have ridden it a lot, around India for another roadtrip, on the racetrack, and on the high-speed test track of NARTSA.

Recently, I got another opportunity to ride it on the racetrack. Not too long ago, I tested it with another striking livery. It is a beautiful combination of Blue, White, and Red. Along with my usual signature elements. Another thing that has a prominent place in this livery is a certain brand. The brand has seen a bit of a resurgence. Or better yet, a revolution and suddenly, it has become a matter of national pride. I am talking about Eurogrip.

Eurogrip has been a well-known name for a long time. But in recent times, it has really scaled and evolved at an unprecedented rate. It is suddenly an OEM supplier for brands like Aprilia, and with a product line that can hang with the best in the world. The Aprilia RS 457, made in India for the world, is shod with Eurogrip Proteus Extreme tyres, and it is shipped worldwide with those tyres! Moreover, they have entered the big bike game as well. And that is what this piece is about, alongside my experience on the Buza.

Extra Braking Horse Power | Apr - May 26 | 9

We have had a very good experience with Eurogrip Roadround tyres. During RTU25, our ZX-10R was shod with Roadround tyres as we went around India. Eurogrip has also been kind enough to invite us over for their track days, and we have seen the Roadround in action there as well. So when I was going around looking for a new set of tyres for my Bupa, I decided to give them a shot. And I have been very, very impressed.

Right after the tyre change, I got an opportunity for a track day. Instead of just taking my ZX-10R, I took three motorcycles and alternated between them. The Suzuki Hayabusa was one of them. For the most part, Eurogrip Roadround tyres are meant for the road. Big bikes, yes, but for the roads. So, imagine my surprise when they held up on India's fastest racetrack along with one of the fastest motorcyclists out there!

The opportunity of riding on the racetrack was courtesy of Apex Racing Academy. If you want to learn the art of riding on the racetrack or even full-

Now, back to the experience. Because the Suzuki Hayabusa is meant mainly for straight-line speed (and it comes really really, almost deceptively so) and these tyres are not 'meant' for the racetrack, I was taking it easy. But as the lap piled on and I gained more and more confidence, I pushed the Bupa as hard as I could without scraping its exhaust pipes. If you take a look at the pictures, I was really going for it.

12 | Apr - May 26 | Extra Breaking Horse Power

Despite that, I never felt limited by the tyres. Surprised? Well, I was too. But here's what's going on. The Roadround tyres are a result of cutting-edge technology and innovation in tyre manufacturing. The majority of the credit goes to what Eurogrip calls Quadrazone technology. In simple terms, it uses multiple compounds in various places on the tyre based on the need.

The centre part of the tyre has a harder compound. Since that is the patch that is worn the most during regular usage, this compound gives these tyres a very impressive mileage. Now, around the shoulders, there is a softer compound. That ensures a predictable and dependable grip when the motorcycle is leaned over. But that is not it. At the edges of the tyres, there's an even softer compound that ensures even more confidence when you are really pushing it. Like I was, and that too with a Bupa on the Buddh International Circuit.

Extra Breaking Horse Power | Apr - May 26 | 13

I loved how much traction and confidence I had, even when I was braking hard entering a turn or accelerating hard exiting one. Being able to handle the loads and forces generated by a motorcycle that weighs over 300 kilos, makes nearly 150 bhp of power and has 150 lbs of torque, I need a special set of tyres. And the Eurogrip Roadhound tyres did it with absolute ease.

But then, I was curious about how they do on the road. After all, these are meant to be road tyres, right? And while not as intense as the racetrack, public roads bring their own set of challenges. The unpredictability of the road conditions and the unpredictability of the sheer number of people on the road. You need nothing but the best. I am very happy to say that these tyres did as well as I expected after RTU25.

16 | Apr - May/26 | Extra Braking Horse Power

The groove configuration is widely spaced and designed to expel the water from under the contact patch as quickly as possible. So in wet conditions, Eurogrip Roadhound offers a ton of grip. Though I did not encounter any such occasions where I had to utilize the wet grip, we had a lot of that during RTU, and therefore, I have no doubts about it. Other than that, in the dry, they are just rocksteady. Highway speeds are a breeze, and even some rougher escapades are welcomed by these tyres.

Overall, I found these tyres to be excellent all-rounders. I had a very good time on the racetrack and had absolutely nothing to complain about on the road. If you like sports-touring and even want a job at the racetrack, you cannot go wrong with these tyres... even on a superbike! Anything other than setting blazing lap times or competitive racing, these tyres can do it all. But do not take my word for it, give it a shot. I KNOW you will be thrilled!

TVS Srichakra announces ₹220 crore capex plan

Our Bureau
Chennai

TVS Srichakra Ltd, the Madurai-based tyre manufacturer, has announced a ₹220 crore capital expenditure plan for its manufacturing facilities at Vellaripatti to expand capacity across its two/three-wheeler and off-highway tyre segments.

CAPACITY EXPANSION

The company's two-wheeler tyre plant, which currently has a production capacity of around 210-235 lakh tyres per annum and is operating at 80-85 per cent utilisation, will undergo a capacity expansion of about 5 per cent.

The additional capacity is expected to be commissioned in the first half of FY29. TVS Srichakra plans to invest up to ₹110 crore in the expansion. The company said the move is aimed at meeting rising demand for its two- and three-wheeler tyres.

At its off-highway tyre plant, which has an existing capacity of around 75-85 tonnes per annum and utilisation levels of 75-80 per cent, the company plans to increase capacity by about 25 per cent. The expansion is scheduled to be completed in the first half of FY28. An investment of up to ₹110 crore has been earmarked for the project.

The company said the investment is intended to cater to growing demand for off-highway tyres.

The capex will be funded through internal accruals and debts, the company said in stock exchange announcement.

NET PROFIT

Meanwhile, the company more than tripled its consolidated net profit to ₹36 crore for the fourth quarter ended March 31, 2026, compared with ₹10 crore in the corresponding quarter last year. Revenue for the quarter rose 20 per cent to ₹981 crore from ₹818 crore a year earlier.

For FY26, net profit more than tripled to ₹71 crore from ₹20 crore in the previous fiscal, while revenue increased 12 per cent to ₹3,643 crore from ₹3,254 crore.
